SPECIAL SERVICE STAFF: ITS ORIGIN, MISSION AND POTENTIAL

PREPARED BY ACTS, U.S.S. FOR BICENTENNIAL MEETING OF REGIONAL COMMISSIONERS AT CHARLOTTESVILLE, VIRGINIA NOVEMBER 1 AND 2, 1972

CONFIDENTIAL

I. Introduction

Recognizing the right to honestly and peacefully protest, assemble, and petition the government is inherent in the freedom of each citizen. Any abuse of these rights reflects a chipping away at fundamental principles regarding rights, freedoms, and the rights of grievance. These are those who readily understand our present society, and would tear it down if they could. Unreasonable demands are being presented to all levels of government as well as to private business. Unlike the violence and riots of the sixties, the early seventies have focused on a more frightening combination of protests and problems which are sure to carry us well into the seventies—likely escalating in intensity and frequency. Well organized protest groups have turned their attention away from the winding down Vietnam War issues.

Today they are concerned with future strategies directed at the economic structure of this country, with particular emphasis towards the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) and the Internal Bureau of Investigation (FBI). Businessmen and income tax payers feel it desirable to have a "civilian fund" and "alternative fund" into which funds are being directed.

The deletion of materials from these exhibits some of which were previously classified to maintain the integrity of the internal operating procedures of the agencies involved, and to protect intelligence sources and methods. Further deletions were made with respect to protecting the privacy of certain individuals and groups. These deletions do not change the material content of these exhibits.

2 Under criteria determined by the Committee in consultation with the Internal Revenue Service and the Federal Bureau of Investigation, certain materials have been deleted from these exhibits, some of which were previously classified to maintain the integrity of the Internal operating procedures of the agencies involved, and to protect intelligence sources and methods. Further deletions were made with respect to protecting the privacy of certain individuals and groups. These deletions do not change the material content of these exhibits.
Starting with 57 files, identified by the Congressional Committee, within less than one year after this Compliance Group was established, information had been accumulated and consolidated into 100 individual files. Currently, the Group now known as Special Service Staff, ACTS (S-388) has 1,100 files (8,000 individuals and 2,000 organizations). In the composition of these files are 12,000 classified documents. In addition, established files the Staff has availability to a computerized portfolio furnished by another agency. This listing of names of individuals and groups who pose a threat to enmity or destruction of the country currently identifies another 16,000 entities where tax violations would appear probable.

Until the Special Service Staff was formalized, February 11, 1952, its activity was limited and evident and apparent to few people outside and before becoming knowledgeable of its mission and objectives. Investigative personnel particularly should be more familiar with this Staff's activity and mission as outlined in H.R. 1160. Also, there is need to increase field awareness of the importance of the investigative information furnished by the Staff to district offices.

There are in the field to implement certain recommendations of a recent computerization feasibility study. Some degree of modernization appears necessary to cope with the accumulation and quantity of data received by the Staff from sources within and outside the Service.

The Staff acting as a central intelligence gathering facility consolidates data available within IRS and pay obtainable from other investigative or law enforcement agencies. Consolidated data in the files suggests there are two major categories of organizations and individuals identified as likely to be violating Federal statute, including the tax laws and paying requirements of the IRS.

These organizations and individuals can be generally categorized as (1) Violent Groups, those who advocate and practice armed, anti-banking and destruction of property; and (2) tax resistant groups engaged in groups to fund through P.S. Postal Service, make threat against public officials; plot and organize criminal acts; engage in activities involving illegal procurement of firearms and ammunition; have engaged in planning and carrying out sabotage and disorders; and also propaganda and distribute publications advocating revolution against the government of this country. In category (2) there are ample evidence of activities involving so-called non-violent groups, who by alleged peaceful demonstrations, etc., their, actually intimidate violence and obstruction, include those who publicly destroy and burn draft cards, destroy Selective Service office property, perform economic sabotage, and other tax demonstrations, organize summer and summer camp which attract youth and members, and in leading role of firearms to five Republican Areas, Arab terrorists, etc., at least in California and North Dakota. There is evidence of existence of active plots and secrecy relating to others and propaganda in connection and resistance to authority by encouraging the Armed Forces to enter into alliances to subvert the nation, and there is evidence from other documents that large numbers of these groups exist. This and other groups the USA are being used to establish and organize groups with the aim of overthrow of the government.

III. Current postulates employed by the Special Service Group

Currently, as information is received, it is reviewed for indications of non-compliance, such as tax returns, excise tax returns, contributions to unregistered organizations, the channelling of funds by exempt organizations to non-exempt organizations, of items of unreported income, no report of income tax, income tax returns, etc. For example, sales, and the failure to file state or federal income tax returns, cash, and employment taxes. Publications and documents are reviewed for information of tax strike or resistance movement.

When any of the above indications are present, file search is made for indicate of similar return, and tax files and Social Security records are made for possible unreported sources of wages and earnings.

If the review and evaluation so warrants, financial and tax data is transmitted to the District Audit, Intelligence, or Taxation Division. Some amount of the information is classified, it cannot be reproduced under the Department of the Treasury, and as necessary, must be accepted and approved. These recommendations may relate to specific individuals, organizations, or groups of individuals.

Should other agencies desire information relative to tax returns or investigations, they must request it through official channels observing the interdepartmental procedures.

In addition, information and trends on tax strike and resistance movements is sent to districts affected. Under present procedures, the existing districts determine as what extent the information is used.

The Staff has also informed the National Office Protective Program Branch of Facilities Management and the National Office Commanding the Intelligence Division when there are indications of protest or demonstrations which would be a threat to Internal Revenue premises.

Examples of several types of Special Service Staff referrals have been conducted and included as exhibits in a package of attachments. These show the tax evasion possibilities that exist in both the mail and collection fields, including income, gift and employment taxes. (Exhibit 12).
The pocket also contains samples of materials published and circulated by members of the tax strike and resistance movements. To show the degree of vigilance that these movements have reached, the last exhibit in this package is a reproduced FBI report on a national convention of activists recently held in August at Kansas City with Internal Revenue Service as their focal point of attention.

IV. Potential source and availability of Special Service Staff

The files of the Special Service Staff contain vast amounts of information pertaining to types of individuals and organizations described. This material is recorded on a day by day basis and it has been impossible for the Staff to keep pace with this growth. As a result, although files have been established, there is a great deal of material which has not been evaluated, and consequently has not been referred to field offices.

This material is available to revenue agents, special agents, and revenue officers working on individuals or organizations involved on these left or right wing movements, one of the problems has been that examining personnel are not aware of the Staff's existence and its mission or operation. As stated before, the time has now come when field personnel should be fully informed of the existence of the Staff and the type of information available.

Should an agent or revenue officer be assigned a case falling into one of the categories discussed, he should feel free to direct an inquiry to the Special Service Staff to see if there is any information or idea on that could be obtained that would aid in their investigation. The file could contain internal information to assist in an audit or it could possibly be a current address to assist in closing a TIVA or TIPA inquiry. Inquiries can either be by mail or telephoned and a written address or telephone number shown on the transmittal letter (See Exhibit 2-4 in attachment).

Many of the files are extremely voluminous containing detailed financial information. In such instances it may be preferable to have field personnel come in and extract pertinent data from the case file. However, due to the classified nature of the files, it would be necessary to obtain a special security clearance for each employee desiring to make such an inspection. Since some of the files are Top Secret and the degree of clearance should be kept at a minimum, Staff members with Top Secret clearance can extract and organize pertinent data of this nature if needed.

While the Special Service Staff is essentially an information gathering and dissemination operation, it should not be considered a one-way street. Field personnel should be advised that for information and data concerning these organizations and individuals indicating they willfully ignore or violate tax statutes. This added resource would open an effective foreign communication channel which can be used to improve any Internal Revenue Service actions required. This is especially important where such information would cross district or regional lines permitting coordination with other offices.

Further, field personnel should also be alerted to criminal violations other than those involving the tax statutes. This could include any indication of acts of violence, incitement of violent dissension, threats against Government officials or officers, etc. Such information should also be channeled to the Staff so they can coordinate with the appropriate agency.

V. Conclusion and discussion

It has now been discussed in some detail how this Special Service Staff activity functions, what its purpose is, and how effective it is. And, if one can say, it is utilized by the Service. The magnitude and potential of this activity is impressive. A recent internal audit of the Special Service Staff fully supports the conclusion that this function offers high potential as a deterrent to criminal behavior as well as an effective tool in coping with widespread tax violations sponsored by activist groups.

Certainly Internal Revenue Service inspectors and agents can only do so much on their own in trying to collect taxes, investigate or examine these organizations and individuals, who through various methods have collaborated to form a revolutionary force, which it appears to develop gradually will become well established before becoming apparent. Perhaps the only way to combat a tax rebellion growth or movement in our society is for the Internal Revenue Service, which now has this Special Service Staff access to reliable intelligence information, to expose the hard core leaders and prime elements in any group who advance the present system.

This presentation should give you some additional insight into the formation and potential for a central intelligence gathering facility of this nature. Hopefully, it has also encouraged you to think about "what is to be done?" Among the alternatives to be considered and discussed:

1. Using the Special Service Staff as a weapon, would it be prudent to develop a more aggressive approach using strike force contacts with special emphasis on criminal code provisions under Title 18 in connection with Title 26.

Subject: Request to be Placed on Dissemination List

Attention: Special Agent Patrick D. Putnam

For your information I have formed a committee of some of our Compliance people to gather data and recommend actions to be taken within the Internal Revenue Service relating to various organizations of predominantly dissent or extremist nature and/or people prominently identified with these organizations.

The group I have formed is named the Activist Organizations Committee and is now functioning with Mr. Paul D. Wright as chairman.

I will appreciate this committee being placed on your dissemination list for information which relates to the type of organizations mentioned above and people associated with them. At this time we request file data on the organizations listed on the attachment to this memorandum.

It is apparent that additional requests for information on organizations and individuals will be made as this committee proceeds with its assignment.

I will appreciate your approval of this initial request and ask that any data transmitted be delivered to the attention of Mr. Wright, Room 3503, Internal Revenue Service, 111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C.

List of Organizations
Information has been received from Mr. Paul H. Wright of IRS that IRS, as a result of White House and Congressional pressure in connection with a program looking toward tax and gun law violations on the part of New Left, black extremist, and white extremist organizations and individuals connected therewith. Attached letter from IRC Assistant Commissioner Donald Bacon requests that IRS be placed on FBI discrimination for a number of these organizations under investigation by us.

Wright advised that as a result of considerable pressure from Congress and the White House, IRS has formed a Committee at IRS headquarters known as the Activist Organizations Committee, whose function is to collect all pertinent information relating to violations by left and extremist organizations, as well as individuals primarily connected therewith, and thereafter initiate field investigations and audits of those groups and individuals looking toward uncovering tax violations and violations of the Gun Control Act of 1968. In attached letter Bacon requests that IRS be placed on discrimination for our investigative reports involving 72 organizations. He requests that such discrimination be made to IRS headquarters, Room 5500, Attention Mr. Paul H. Wright.

A review of the list of organizations enclosed with Bacon's letter indicates the organizations are primarily of a New Left, black extremist or white extremist nature. Many of the organizations listed have not been investigated by us.

The concentrated program of this nature, if properly implemented, should deal a blow to extremist elements. This letter to many agencies, we have already demonstrated to the Department of Justice as many of the organizations listed. It is felt that we should forward to the IRS recently

MEMORANDUM FOR:

SUBJECT: IRS Briefing on RAMPARTS

1. On 1 February 1967 I met with Thomas Terry, Assistant to the Commissioner, IRS to brief him on the current status of the RAMPARTS matter and to seek his cooperation. Also present were Leon Green, Executive Assistant to the Assistant Commissioner for Compliance, and John Barber, Chief of Rulings, Exempt Organizations Branch. All three officials have been closely involved with us in the recent developments about USNSA and its organizational activities. In particular . . .

2. I told them of the information and rumors we have heard about RAMPARTS' proposed exposes with particular reference to USNSA and [org.] I impressed upon them the Director's concern and expressed our certainty that this is an attack on CIA in particular and the administration in general, which is merely using USNSA and [as tools]. To emphasize the nature of the problem I read to them excerpts from Mr. [Name] memorandum of 25 January 1967 relating statements and actions of RAMPARTS officials in the period 22-25 January. We also discussed other probable sources of information being used by RAMPARTS, including the many leads which probably originated from the "Palman Eight" exposure. The possibility of Harry Osher of Palman staff having cooperated with RAMPARTS was mentioned.

3. Barber advised that the IRS examiner handling the USNSA reapplication for tax-exempt status has just completed his findings. He has recommended that USNSA be granted tax exemption under IRC Section 501(c)(4) which is the classification for "social welfare" organizations. In the examiner's view USNSA is disqualified for 501(c)(3) status as a political action organization. If it is exempt under 501(c)(4), donations to it will not be deductible by the donor and . . .

It will be more difficult for it to get donations from organizations which are exempt under Section 501(c)(3). It was also pointed out that USNSA had become so notorious and the subject of so many public complaints to IRS that it had been put under audit and might have had its 501(c)(3) exemption revoked even if it had not been required to file a new application for exemption by virtue of its reorganization.

4. I suggested that the corporate tax returns of RAMPARTS, Inc. be examined and that any leads to possible financial supporters be followed up by an examination of their individual tax returns. It is unlikely that such an examination will develop much worth-while information as to the magazine's source of financial support, but it is possible that some leads will be evident. The returns can be called in for review by the Assistant Commissioner for Compliance without causing any particular notice in the respective IRS districts. The proposed examination would be made by Mr. Green who would advise me if there appeared to be any information on the returns worth following up. The political sensitivity of the case is such that if we are to go further than this, it will be necessary for the Agency to make a formal request for the returns under a procedure set forth in Government regulations. If such a request is made, the Commissioner will not be in a position to deny our interest if questioned later by a member of Congress or other competent authority.

5. This matter contains the elements for political repercussions against the Internal Revenue Service as well as this Agency and Mr. Terry feels that we can make no move until he has briefed the Commissioner. The Commissioner had already expressed concern over public comment about USNSA's tax exemption, even though he knew nothing at the time of the Agency's involvement with USNSA. Mr. Terry will brief the Commissioner as soon as possible and contact me when he has done so.

SUBJECT: Payment to Confidential Sources (Informants)

The Internal Revenue Manual, Sections 372, 9372 and Policy Statement P-9-35 (copies of which are attached) provides guidance for payment to sources for confidential information. These instructions supplement the manual and are provided for your everyday guidance.

Payment for information will be made only when the information is not available otherwise. Each of you have non-paid sources. In those situations calling for payment for expenses of information, our approach will be conservative as to amounts paid but progressive as to seeking and getting the needed information.

Type of Funds

Impecc fund payments to confidential sources must be paid from the proper fund. If the information obtained relates to NTP, then the funds must be paid from NTP funds. The same applies to the TPG or Strike Force. When requesting funds, please specify the intended program.

Location of Funds

Confidential funds for the ICSR operation will be maintained in Miami in the custody of the ICSR Group Manager. Each ICSR agent, at FOD's discretion, will be advanced a small fund. An interim receipt will be signed for the advance. Expenditures from the advance will not be made without the approval of the Group Manager.
Types of Payment Authorized

Payment may be authorized for expenditures from the confidential funds for:

(1) Expenses for or in behalf of source.
(2) Information.
(3) Securing evidence.

Type of expenses includable (among others) may be hotel room or other space rental, auto rental, travel, food and beverage, or utilities and phone.

Payment will not be authorized for "front" money or a promise by the source that he will deliver in the future. In some circumstances, authorization will be granted to advance expense money.

Types of Information Sought

Information which we seek and for which we will make payment is contained in Policy Statement P-9-36. We must guard against using the confidential fund in any other way. Payment for information is made only when the information is unavailable otherwise. For example, payment will not be made for an arrest report when such a report is public record. Neither will we pay a source to search public records for us or to do other type investigative work.

Authorization for Making Payment

Each expenditure from the confidential fund will be approved by the Group Manager before payment is made to the source (informant) or before any expenses are incurred by the source. After the source has been debriefed, the special agent will write a memorandum to file of information obtained and/or expenses incurred. This memorandum will be forwarded to the Group Manager for review. The special agent will attach to the memorandum a note recommending amount of payment and will also recommend distribution of the memorandum. After review, the Group Manager will authorize payment to the source by the agent and set the amount of payment. The Group Manager will notify the agent of the amount approved. After approval, the agent can use funds on hand for payment.
At time of payment, the agent will obtain a receipt (Standard Form 1165) from the source. The receipt will be forwarded, along with a signed "Confidential Expenditure from Imprint Fund" form DIR J INT-52, to the Group Manager.

General

Under no circumstances will "regular" payments be made to a source. That is, we have no one on the payroll. We only pay for information received as evaluated and recommended by the special agent and approved by the Group Manager.

Each of us must exercise care in submitting any vouchers or claims for reimbursement when the special agent is involved in dining with the source. In such a situation, payment will only be made for expenses incurred by the agent over and above what he would normally have spent for a meal. All of us have been given a big responsibility in handling imprint funds. We must use these funds carefully and frugally.

In the event of any emergency situation, please call the Group Manager for information and authority for payment.

John D. Anderson
Dear Commissioner Alexander:

This transmits a copy of our report of results of the special on-line audit of narcotics termination assessments.

The Service has made approximately 3,500 narcotics termination assessments totaling $104 million since August 1971. These assessments have generally been made under tight time constraints based on information furnished by local law enforcement agencies with little or no independent investigation by the Service. The information furnished is generally not sound evidence, but primarily consists of projections, opinions or conclusions of the local law enforcement officers. The investigations are not of the same depth as normal audit examinations.

In these cases, field agents initiate immediate assessments in order to seize assets in custody of local authorities before the assets are reclaimed by the taxpayers or their attorneys. The individuals arrested by local police generally remain in their custody for less than 24 hours.

We found that procedures and practices used in terminating the tax years vary nationally from district to district, and as a result tax laws and regulations are not applied consistently and equitably to all taxpayers.

The terminations are usually made on the basis that the taxpayer's illegal narcotics involvement constitutes a "prima facie" case. With few exceptions, there is no other hard evidence that income taxes are due or that collection of taxes are in jeopardy.
Commissioner Alexander

Since the Service does not issue Statutory Notices of Deficiency in these cases the taxpayers do not have the administrative appeal rights afforded to taxpayers subjected to jeopardy assessments or tax deficiencies arising from normal audit procedures. This fact coupled with the fact that the majority of the termination assessments are not supported by hard documented evidence gives rise to the distinct possibility that: (a) irreparable harm may be suffered by some of the taxpayers; and (b) the Service may be accused of assessing tax liabilities without due process of law.

The weaknesses in the termination assessments are illustrated by the results of full year follow up examinations which often result in substantial reductions and refunds to the taxpayers when detailed examinations are made. In other instances where the taxpayers do not file full year returns, quality examinations are often not conducted. In these cases, the full year liability generally approximates the short period liability.

In order to gain more time to conduct an investigation, one district issues a summons to local police for assets in possession of the narcotics law violator at the time of arrest. The local police hold the property for up to ten days while the Service conducts an investigation. A similar practice in another district was discontinued in late 1973 after Regional Counsel rendered an opinion that this practice was an improper use of a summons.

Due to the common characteristics of these termination assessments, one adverse Supreme Court decision could affect hundreds of cases. For instance, if the Supreme Court should affirm a recent decision by the 6th Circuit Court of Appeals requiring the issuance of a Statutory Notice of Deficiency within 60 days of a termination assessment, all termination assessments may be rendered invalid. The Service has received other adverse decisions on termination assessments in lower courts, and has compromised other cases after the taxpayers filed suit.
Commissioner Alexander

Copies of the report have been transmitted to the Assistant Commissioner (Compliance) and the Assistant Commissioner (ACTS).

We will be pleased to discuss the report with you if you wish.

Sincerely,

Introduction and Scope of Audit

This report summarizes results of a special on-line audit requested by the Commissioner. The audit objectives were to determine whether Service policies, procedures, and practices used in terminating the tax years of narcotics subjects are in accordance with income tax laws and regulations and whether these policies, practices, and procedures are applied consistently and equitably in arriving at factually supported tax determinations.

Reviews were made in the Los Angeles and San Francisco Districts in the Western Region, in the Chicago and St. Louis Districts in the Midwest Region, and the Jacksonville and Columbia Districts in the Southeast Region. This report consolidates the findings resulting from these reviews as well as findings resulting from other recent audits.

Summary of Results of Review

We found that procedures and practices for terminating tax years of narcotics law violators vary nationally from district to district, and that as a result, tax laws and regulations are not applied consistently and equitably to all taxpayers. For instance, all six districts included in the review generally set a minimum value of assets seized ranging from $500 to $2,000 in determining whether a case should be considered for termination action. Also, the employees responsible for preparing termination reports (revenue officers, revenue agents, or special agents) vary from district to district.

Five of the six districts rely primarily upon information furnished by other law enforcement agencies and informants in making termination assessments. The information is generally received telephonically, and is often based on personal opinions, projections, conclusions or hearsay evidence rather than specific documented facts.
concerning the subject. In some cases other minimal independent investigations are made by the Service; however, they are not of the same depth as normal audit examinations.

The sixth district, Jacksonville, issues a summons to local police for assets in the possession of a narcotics subject at the time of arrest. The police then hold the taxpayer's property for up to ten days while the Service conducts an investigation. A similar practice in one district in the Southwest Region was discontinued in 1973 after Regional Counsel rendered an opinion that this practice was an improper use of a summons.

Generally, all six districts terminate the tax years of narcotics law violators on the basis that the taxpayer's illegal narcotics involvement constitutes a "prima facie" case in which termination assessments should be made (IRM 4585.3). With few exceptions, there is no other hard evidence that income taxes are due or that the collection of such taxes are in jeopardy in these cases.

Although the burden is upon the Government in proving taxable income in these cases, the tax assessments are generally based upon taxable income estimated by a variety of methods. Due to the limited information available, these methods are generally not effective in determining a factually documented taxable income. For example, when the net worth and expenditures method is used, the taxpayer's net worth at the beginning and the end of the tax period is generally unknown. In addition, estimated costs of living expenses, which are often included in the net worth and expenditure computations, are generally not supported by facts in the case file. Other methods are usually equally ineffective in arriving at a factually documented taxable income due to the lack of detailed information.

The weaknesses in the termination tax assessments are further illustrated by the fact that the full year follow-up of these examination cases often results in substantial reductions in the tax assessments and refunds to the taxpayers. For instance, the full year examination of 24 termination assessment cases in the Chicago District resulted in recommendations that the termination tax assessments be reduced in all 24 cases. It was recommended that assessments totaling $910,200 be reduced by $772,500 to $137,700. If the cases are settled on this basis, the taxpayers will be due refunds totaling approximately $136,000. Conversely, in the Los Angeles District the review of 55 cases where the substitute for return procedure was used disclosed that the substitute returns were based primarily on the same information used to compute the termination period income. As a result there were 30 cases where the full year income was the same as the termination period income. In the remaining 25 cases the income was more or less than the termination period income, however, facts to support the changes were not fully documented in the file.

Due to the common characteristics of these termination assessments, one adverse Supreme Court decision could affect hundreds of cases. For instance, if the Supreme Court should affirm a recent decision by the 6th Circuit Court of Appeals requiring the issuance of a Statutory Notice of Deficiency within 60 days of a termination assessment, all termination assessments may be rendered invalid. The Service has received other adverse decisions on termination assessments in lower courts, and has compromised other cases after the taxpayers filed suit.

On June 17, 1971, the President announced the Administration's expanded effort to combat drug abuse. Included in the Presidential message was a charge to the Internal Revenue Service to conduct systematic tax investigations of middle and upper echelon narcotics traffickers.

Generally, the interpretation of the Service policies and procedures by the field has been to terminate an individual with a history and background of illegal activities coupled with a current arrest for narcotics violations.

The field agents of the Service have been faced with a requirement to make immediate assessment to prevent dissipation of the assets seized by local authorities at the time of arrest. Usually it becomes a race with the taxpayer and/or his attorney. The majority of these assessments are based primarily on the information from the arresting officers because of the short time pressure factor. The individuals arrested usually have liquid assets only and remain in the custody of police less than 24 hours.

During the review, a District Director stated that there is not sufficient time to perfect a case to the extent that it would hold up in Court.

Appendix A summarizes the number and amounts of termination assessments made in the six districts tested and United States totals by Region for fiscal years 1972, 1973, and the first three quarters of 1974.

Details of Results of Review

General Procedures

We found that the procedures and practices for terminating tax years vary from region to region and within the regions from district to district. As a result, tax laws and regulations are not applied consistently to all taxpayers. For example, all six districts included in this special review generally set a minimum value of assets seized in determining whether a case should be considered for termination action. The Columbia District requires a minimum of $500 cash seized for a termination action while the Jacksonville District requires $2,000 in total assets seized.

In Los Angeles termination assessments were made against taxpayers who had been arrested for possession and or sale of narcotics with cash or readily identifiable assets in excess of $1,000. In San Francisco termination assessments were made against taxpayers who had been arrested on charges of sale of narcotics where there is information to show that income has been earned from that activity and that the taxpayers had cash or readily identifiable assets of at least $1,000.

In the St. Louis and Chicago Districts generally only those taxpayers who had at least $1,000 in their possession at the time of the arrest were terminated.

Internal Revenue Code Section 6851; Policy Statement P 4-89; and Internal Revenue Manual Section 4585, generally set forth specific circumstances and/or action by taxpayers that would jeopardize collection of taxes when subsequently due, and therefore provide a basis for tax year termination, assessment, and collection of taxes not otherwise due. The specific conditions and circumstances for tax year termination and assessment under IRC Section 6851 are summarized in Policy Statement P-4-89 (Approved 10-2-70) as follows:
"Termination of taxable period and assessment should be used sparingly and care should be taken to avoid excessive and unreasonable assessments. They should be limited to amounts which reasonably can be expected to equal the ultimate tax liability for the terminated period. Each termination of taxable period and assessment must receive the personal approval of the District Director or the Director of International Operations.

"A termination of taxable period and assessment will not be made without the existence of at least one of the three following conditions, unless prior approval is obtained from the Director, Audit Division:

(1) The taxpayer is or appears to be designing quickly to depart from the United States or to conceal himself.

(2) The taxpayer is or appears to be designing quickly to place his property beyond the reach of the Government either by removing it from the United States, or by concealing it, or by transferring it to other persons, or by dissipating it.

(3) The taxpayer's financial solvency is or appears to be imperiled. (This does not include cases where the taxpayer becomes insolvent by virtue of the accrual of the proposed assessment of tax, penalty and interest.)"

Internal Revenue Manual Section 4585 and Section 3(11)4 of the Techniques Handbook for In-Depth Audit Investigations, IRM 4235, provide requirements and specific guidelines for tax year terminations and documentation required, to the extent practicable, for termination investigations, and recommendations and approval of termination actions. The required documentation, to the extent practicable, includes:
(1) The name, address, and filing history of the taxpayer.

(2) Tax and penalty to be assessed by periods.

(3) The nature of the taxpayer's business or activity; the taxpayer's financial condition; information regarding the taxpayer's activity giving rise to the termination recommendation, such as transferring assets without consideration or attempts to hide assets, etc.; information regarding business losses; the nature and location of the taxpayer's assets and sources of income; and the taxpayer's record of resisting payment of taxes in the past.

(4) Any other information regarding the taxpayer's financial condition, prospects for future losses, etc.

Review of recent termination recommendation reports and case files in the six districts showed that the files and reports were generally not documented with facts to show specific circumstances or acts by the taxpayers that would make collection of the taxes, when due, ineffective. Instead, the districts generally terminated the tax years on the basis that the taxpayer's illegal narcotics involvement constituted a "prima facie" case in which termination assessments should be made (IRM 4585.3).

However, IRM 4585.3 specifically requires that "prima facie" tax year terminations for taxpayers arrested on charges of possession and/or sale of narcotics should be supported by documented information to establish a factual foundation to show that subsequent collection of the taxes, not yet due, was in jeopardy, and that the termination actions were within the statutory provisions of IRC Section 6851.
Operating personnel stated that assessments must be made immediately in order to prevent the taxpayers from assigning their liquid assets to attorneys or other persons with the effect of placing them beyond the reach of the Service and that it is generally not possible to obtain specific factual documentation in the time available.

In the Jacksonville District the review indicates that the problem of immediate assignment of assets to others has been circumvented, at least temporarily by the immediate issuance of an IRS summons to the arresting officers. On receipt of the summons, local police retain possession of the taxpayer's "property", including cash, for 10 days. While having no legal effect on the ability of a narcotics violator to assign away his liquid assets, it has been effective in preventing the dissipation of his assets in this manner and has allowed the examining agent additional time for case preparation.

However, a recent review in the Oklahoma City District showed that summonses have been used in that district also. In May 1973, Regional Counsel interpreted the issuance of a summons for this purpose as an improper application of the provisions of IRC Section 7602 and recommended discontinuance of the practice.

Differences were noted also in the placement of responsibility for preparation of termination documents. In Los Angeles termination reports are prepared by revenue officers in the Offer-in-Compromise Group while in San Francisco the reports are prepared by revenue agents in the Narcotics Group.

In the Chicago District the special agent assigned to the team will initially be advised of the referral and in-turn will contact the revenue agent and revenue officer. The revenue agent has the responsibility of preparing all documents necessary for a valid assessment upon approval of the team leader. The special agent has the prime responsibility for the coordination with other agencies and the control of any criminal aspects of the case.
In the St. Louis District any division may originate the recommendation for a termination assessment although the Intelligence Division is generally the initial contact point for the other law enforcement agencies.

In the Jacksonville District the revenue agent initiates the termination action, while in the Columbia District the special agent has primary responsibility.

In four districts in the Central Region the use of termination assessments has been restricted because of a recent decision by the 6th Circuit Court of Appeals requiring issuance of statutory notices of deficiency.

Instructions in the North-Atlantic Region require that Regional Counsel be consulted in each case where a tax year termination assessment is being considered.

Examination Procedures - Short Year Terminations

The burden is on the Service to prove the existence of taxable income in termination actions. However, we found that generally these assessments were based on income estimated by a variety of methods which have for the most part proven ineffective in factually determining taxable income. The following assumptions were usually necessary in the income determinations: that income was earned during the period terminated; that funds on hand or used to purchase the drugs were from taxable sources; and that the funds were taxable to the individual in possession of the cash and/or narcotics.

In the Los Angeles and San Francisco Districts computations of taxable income were based primarily on information provided by law enforcement officers regarding the circumstances of the arrest for sale or possession of narcotics.

In 14 of 19 recent termination assessment cases reviewed in Los Angeles, the net worth and expenditures method was used in computing taxable income. In 4 of the 14 cases a cost of living estimate was not included in the income computation. In the other 10 cases cost of living estimates ranged from $400 to $1,500 per month, but the files were not documented with specific facts to support the estimates. For 11 of the 14 cases, the taxpayers' marital status was not determined. In one case, the taxpayer was allowed a deduction for dependents, but the files in the other 13 cases did not establish whether the taxpayers were entitled to deductions for dependents.

The estimated gross sales method was used to compute termination income in the remaining five cases. In four of the five cases the taxpayers were allowed deductions from gross sales for the cost of narcotics sold. In the other case the taxpayer was not allowed the deduction. Also, the case files showed that three of the five taxpayers were married; however, the termination income was assessed against the taxpayer only and was not divided between the taxpayer and spouse in accordance with community property provisions.

In 24 of 26 recent termination assessment cases reviewed in the San Francisco District, the net worth and expenditures method was used in computing taxable income. In these 24 cases, cost of living estimates ranged from $500 to $1,500 per month. In 20 of the 24 cases, the estimates were not supported by specific facts or information in the case file. For all 24 cases, the investigations included a determination of the taxpayer's marital status. For the cases where the taxpayer was married, the termination income was divided in accordance with community property and income provisions. Also, where it was determined that the taxpayers were entitled to deductions for dependents, those deductions were allowed.

In the remaining two cases, termination income was computed by the estimated gross sales method. The taxpayers were married and the income was divided in accordance with community income provisions. The projected gross sales were based on specific admissions by the taxpayer.
In Chicago the net worth and expenditures method was used in computing income in 13 of 18 recent termination assessments reviewed. In the 13 cases, cost of living estimates ranged from $50.00 per week to $40.00 a day. None of the estimates were supported by specific facts in the files.

In the other five cases the income was computed by the estimated gross sales method. In one of the cases, estimated sales were based on hearsay evidence from an informant. In the other four cases, the assessments were based on specific information regarding periods of surveillance, "controlled" purchases, and statements from informants.

In 19 of the 25 recent termination assessment cases reviewed in the Jacksonville District the computations of income were based on a projection of sales over the terminated period. In 10 of the 19 cases the files did not clearly show the basis for the figures used for estimated weekly sales. In most instances, the tax liability determined was closely related to the assets seized. In this regard, the Group Manager explained that in determining the amount to be assessed, the amount expected to be realized from proceeds of the seizure and sale of taxpayer's assets is taken into consideration; that making a large assessment based on information from informants or police estimates would probably leave the Service in an indefensible position in Court if the Service could not show that the taxpayer had assets to support the income estimates.

The income in the other six cases was computed on either the cost of drugs or cost of habit method and the support was considered adequate.

In the St. Louis District taxable income was computed by the estimated gross sales method in two of three termination assessments reviewed. The income computations were not supported by documented facts in the case file. The income computation in the third case was based on a specific income item. In all three cases information that the taxpayers were married was not used, and in two cases information that the taxpayers had dependents was not used.
The computations of income in the eight cases reviewed in the Columbia District were based on a projection of estimated sales over the terminated period. However, in two of the eight cases, the case files either did not clearly show the basis for the estimated weekly sales figures that were used or the file did not clearly show that the length of time the taxpayer had been selling narcotics had been established.

A recent on-line audit report showed that in six of the ten most recent termination cases in the Austin District, the files did not contain substantiation for one or more statements made by narcotics experts which were used in computing taxable income. In one case the file did not substantiate the sales volume of 50 kilos per week or the cost price of $80 per kilo. In another case, the file did not substantiate the source or basis of the cost price of seized heroin, nor did the case file include substantiation for estimated living expenses of $13 per day.

Another recent review in Atlanta showed that the case files did not contain prescribed support for the basis used in estimating receipts from sales of narcotics in 24 of the 29 cases tested. No information was shown regarding the length of time taxpayer was in the narcotics business and no support was shown for the basis used in estimating gross sales except that the estimates were those of a narcotics expert. In five of the cases the assessments were supported by documented facts.

Examination Procedures - Full Year Tax Returns

Full year tax returns of narcotics violators previously terminated are subject to an audit examination whether the taxpayer has voluntarily filed a return or not. If the taxpayer has not filed a full year return, substitute for return procedures are followed.

In the Los Angeles District 61 full year 1972 examinations (63 terminations) were reviewed. In six cases where the taxpayers had filed full year tax returns, the examinations were of adequate scope and depth. In five cases, the examinations resulted in significant reductions to the short period tax liability while the sixth case resulted in no change to the short period liability.
In the remaining 55 cases substitute for return procedures were used. We found that in-depth examination procedures were not employed to include: (a) attempts to contact taxpayers or other third parties who would have knowledge of the taxpayers' income producing activities, (b) specific steps to identify changes during the year in the taxpayers' net worth by reviewing bank accounts, (c) attempts to identify assets acquired or sold, and (d) attempts to determine the taxpayers' style of living. The examinations primarily relied upon information developed by the termination investigation. The full year income computations were the same as the termination period income computation in 27 cases and were the same as the termination period income adjusted for annualization of the estimated cost of living rate in three cases. In the other 25 cases the full year income computations were more or less than the termination period income; however, facts to support the changes in income were not fully documented in the case file. Nineteen of the 30 examinations where the full year income was the same as the termination period income involved cases where termination period income computations were not supported by specific facts.

In San Francisco 12 full year 1972 examinations were reviewed. In four cases, the taxpayers had filed full year returns and in the other eight, substitute for return procedures were used. We found that in-depth examination procedures, to the extent practical, were used in all 12 cases.

The full year examination of 24 termination assessment cases reviewed in the Chicago District resulted in recommendations for reductions in the termination tax in all 24 cases. It was recommended that assessments totaling $910,200 be reduced by $772,500 to $137,700. If the cases are settled on this basis, the taxpayers will be due refunds totaling approximately $136,000.

In the St. Louis District four full year examinations had been closed with recommended assessments of $19,727.46. Termination assessments for these cases originally totalled $83,190.15. Therefore, full year examinations resulted in reductions totaling $63,462.69.
The full year examination of 29 termination assessment cases reviewed in the Jacksonville District resulted in termination assessments totaling $668,250 being reduced by $329,406 to $338,844. Most of this difference was attributable to seven cases.

In Columbia the full year examination of 12 cases resulted in recommendations to reduce termination tax assessments from $634,253 to $26,701.

Contested Cases

Reviews were conducted in the San Francisco, Los Angeles, and Jacksonville Districts to determine the Service's experience in defending termination assessment cases in court, with particular emphasis on reasons for the Service having lost any contested cases.

Reviews of the Regional Counsel General Litigation files for Los Angeles and San Francisco District cases disclosed that there have been six contested narcotics cases since June 30, 1972. Two cases were in the Los Angeles District and four cases were in the San Francisco District. Five of these cases were reviewed to determine why the taxpayers had initiated litigation to enjoin the Service from assessment or collection actions. In these cases Regional Counsel identified potential weaknesses in the Service's position as follows: (1) termination income and tax computation were not fully supported by specific facts (3 cases); (2) taxpayer had not received a Statutory Notice of Deficiency for the termination assessment (1 case); and (3) collection action had been initiated before the taxpayer could have received the termination letter (1 case).

In two cases the complaints were dismissed by the taxpayers based on the Service's agreement to compromise the liability. In the third case the taxpayer's suit was dismissed on the basis that the Court lacked jurisdiction to enjoin the assessment and collection of Federal taxes. In the fourth case the judge continued the case in open status with proceedings suspended, pending settlement of appeals on similar cases involving issuances of Statutory Notices of Deficiency for tax year terminations. The fifth case was closed when the full year examination shifted substantially all of the termination income to prior tax year.
Reviews of 11 contested cases in the Jacksonville District disclosed that the Government’s position had been upheld in seven cases, the Government had lost one case in District Court, and three cases were still pending in District Court. In the case the Government lost, Chief Counsel recommended that the Government appeal the decision. In this case, the Government was enjoined from collection of the assessment and was ordered to return the monies seized. The taxpayer had alleged that the District Director’s findings were made without sufficient investigation to support his conclusions and without any true facts to reasonably support the issuance of the termination letter; that the District Director had not issued a notice of deficiency, and that the termination was made at the request of the local law enforcement officials to harass, annoy, and punish the taxpayer and was not done in order to protect the revenue and collect a tax that seemed to be in jeopardy. The taxpayer further alleged that unless the District Director was restrained, the taxpayer would be irreparably injured, inconvenienced, and damaged and his property would be taken from him in violation of due process and equal protection clauses of the Constitution of the United States.

In addition, the St. Louis District forwarded seven termination files to Regional Counsel in January 1974 requesting advisory opinions as to whether the cases would be upheld in Court if the taxpayer protested the assessments. The responses from Regional Counsel showed that five of the cases were weak from the standpoint of litigation and indicated little probability of success should the cases go to trial.

In the Central Region a decision by the 6th Circuit Court of Appeals on February 12, 1974, (Charles R. Rambo v. United States, et. al.) held that notices of deficiency must be issued within 150 days after making termination assessments under Section 6851. However, the Service position is that such notices are not required until a full year return has been filed. Due to the Rambo decision, Regional Counsel suggested that termination assessments be restricted and that jeopardy assessments under Section 6661 be used when possible. Regional Counsel also suggested that when termination assessments are made that property be protected by filing a notice of lien or notice of levy in order to freeze the funds or property rather than to seize and sell.

Request for Services of Accounting Clerk deleted

We recently attended a public meeting of the Illinois Tax Rebellion Committee in an undercover capacity. This organization advocates noncompliance with the IRS laws, and we have therefore begun to monitor their meetings and other related activities. We have found that the organization is very suspicious of IRS personnel attending these public meetings, and we believe that if a female were to accompany the special agent less attention would be drawn to him, thereby improving his cover. The Intelligence Division in Los Angeles, California, which successfully infiltrated this organization in California, commented that they would have been unable to do this without the use of female personnel.

Accounting Clerk deleted has assisted the Intelligence Division in a variety of clerical assignments in the past, and we believe that she would be an excellent selection to accompany the special agent in the attendance of these meetings. She has indicated to us informally that she would be available to assist in this assignment, and we request your approval.

2. Activities of a National Office Undercover Operative and the Trial of a Tax Protester

This situation involved actions of a National Office Undercover Operative used to secure information relative to the tax protester movement in the Los Angeles area. The operative had worked himself into a position of authority with the [pertinent] [intelligence]...

A document (preparer unknown), secured by Internal Audit at the National Office, Intelligence Division, reported on the actions of the undercover operative while in the Los Angeles area. The document notes that, "Sometime in the latter part of 1973, the operative obtained information through private discussions with [the tax protester being tried and two of his associates] relative to the criminal litigation on [the tax protester]. During these discussions, the operative determined that [the tax protester] was going to base his defense upon the issue of individual money. The operative obtained a copy of the brief prepared by the above three individuals, for use in a motion to dismiss one of the counts of [the tax protester's] indictment and accordingly the Intelligence Division was able to notify the U.S. Attorney and also do additional research in order for the U.S. Attorney to properly answer this motion. The motion was finally filed in January 1974, while the Intelligence Division had this information available to it several months before the actual filing date."

The document also noted that, "The undercover operative has supplied his contacts with statements relating to intent and future définies of the following individuals currently or previously under investigation by the Intelligence Division [the document lists the above..."
tax protesters and six other individuals]. The investigation has been visited by [the tax protestor's attorney] on occasions and has attended one meeting at [the attorney's] home. The tax protestor's attorney cooperated with and assisted the majority of tax rebels under investigation by the Intelligence Division.
While the report of activities of the undercover operation is specific as to the fact that "the operative obtained a copy of the brief prepared by the above three individuals...", we have been unable to locate that brief. Our review of this matter, along with other matters relative to the tax-protesting notes above, are continuing.
As requested, statistics were compiled relating to failure to file (26 USC 7203) and false withholding statements (26 USC 7206) investigations conducted by the Los Angeles district I.R.S. Intelligence Division. The figures reflected below were compiled through an analysis of the case inventories (June 1964) and other documents maintained by the Intelligence Division from 1971 to the present. The investigations, which may or may not have culminated in a recommendation for prosecution, relate to the 1970 through 1973 tax years. The following is a summary of the analysis:

subject: Operation Mercury

As you will recall, the National Office requested each region to make arrangements for transcribing six rolls of microfilm which contained information relative to the transmission of money orders, in excess of $1000, during the year 1966. This phase of the operation was completed and punch cards were prepared from the transcription sheets.

The enclosed listings were processed. The information is arranged by state, and payee names are in alpha order by city. The data elements are: payee, to city, state, sender or purchaser, from city, state, amount, date, and reel number.

The source of this information is confidential. The documents were made available to us with the understanding that before we used them for investigative purposes Western Union would be served with a summons, in usual form, describing the documents needed. This procedure must be followed and is referenced in Handbook Section 232.2.

We are mailing the microfilm for the year 1966 to the Chief at St. Paul, Minnesota.

We realize that the statute for the year 1966 will soon expire and that the tax year is closed for civil purposes. Therefore, the Chiefs should make every effort to utilize this information in such a fashion as to achieve maximum benefits. We suggest that this information be matched against open case files, and those names showing substantial activity should be matched against background files.

The strike force representatives should be alerted to the fact that this information is available in the districts.

Operation Bird Dog

The Roaring 20's returned to Atlanta, Georgia, on October 24-28, 1970. People came in sleek limousines, customized automobiles, mink and flamboyant dress for the Muhammad Ali-Jerry Quarry fight on Monday night, October 26. The styles of the 20's prevailed with males challenging the females for the extreme in dress and the brilliance of colors, wearing wide brimmed hats, double-breasted jackets, two-piece suits with coats to the knees and some with full length mink coats.

After observing expensive custom built automobiles at the Regency Hyatt House, Atlanta's swankiest hotel, arrangements were made for the Atlanta District to conduct some old-fashioned bird dogging; that is, the taking of license numbers of the most expensive looking automobiles. The agents reported that the wearing apparel and the automobiles were fantastic with many of the automobiles in the $20,000 to $25,000 cost range.

Attached are lists by states (other than Southeast Region) of the more expensive automobiles, with their respective license numbers, that were in Atlanta for this occasion. The list was compiled from automobiles observed at the better hotels and motels where fight fans were lodging and in and around the Municipal Auditorium, the site of the fight.

Also attached are seven copies each of three newspaper articles relative to a robbery of after-fight partygoers. Written invitations were sent out to a large number of persons for the after-fight party at the home of Name deleted a local racketeer who has been engaged in the numbers racket. It is reported that guests were robbed of from $100,000 to $200,000 in currency, jewelry and clothing. It should be noted, however, that only the following six of the victims were willing to give their names and file complaints with the Atlanta Police Department:

FINAL REPORT

Reference is made to your memorandum dated November 17, 1970 with attachment of memoranda dated November 5, 1970 of the Director, Intelligence Division, to which was attached a sheet listing five Missouri license numbers noted on expensive automobiles at the ALI-QUARRY flight in Atlanta, Georgia on October 26, 1970.

Inquiry regarding the identity of the individuals that were cited in the State report of March 5, 1971 resulted in the rejection of their 1968 and 1969 income tax returns. The investigation revealed that the parties reported sufficient income to warrant their trips to Atlanta, and also indicated that their occupations were such that their trips were more likely to be of a business rather than of a personal nature.

The returns of these individuals, with the exception of _Deleted_, have been returned to the Midwest Service Center. It is believed that the recent return of ir. _Deleted_ a professional wrestler, warrant forwarding to the Audit Division for possible examination in that their inspection indicated inadequate taxable income.

I. Organizations and Individuals

Three Organizations

Deleted

This party was made by those organizations in accordance with procedure formalized in the Soviet Organization Branch, Technical, - (D-P, Nov. 13, 1969). Under this procedure, the committee is given an opportunity to see all open Technical case files pertaining to activist organizations. This permits mutually advantageous initial information exchanges whenever request organization actions are pending on any entity where committee file data has been accumulated.

Three Organizations

Deleted

Through Maisen established with United States Air Force Intelligence the committee has received information that these organizations are soliciting funds to help draft exiles in Canada and Mexico. Funds are being requested to give financial assistance to draft evaders already in those countries and by mailings being distributed in quantity on college campuses in the United States, students are being encouraged to become draft evaders.

II. OTHER ORGANIZATIONS

Three Organizations deleted

Preliminary review has been made of existing data accumulated to date. On the surface it appears each organization should be closely examined, however additional information will be necessary before recommendations can be made.
III. Other Actions

In response to your suggestion to investigate the possibility of a computer program to capture information on these individuals and organizations that are of interest to Compliance, while new cases to offices of the U.S. Secret Service and Department of Justice, each of these agencies has a computer program and a master tape file that is compatible with the computer of Internal Revenue. Action is presently being taken to have a program written for use by Compliance and to secure the master tape file of the U.S. Secret Service and Department of Justice that will serve to establish a tape file for Internal Revenue Service.

District office information is not being received on the list of 22 organizations outlined in your memorandum of 10/8/69 to all Regional Commissioners. Data being received is in comprehensive detail and in nearly every instance additional organization names are being submitted as being relevant to this committee to operations. Telephone discussions with District officials indicate the list of organizations and to those cases already initiated by the committee reveal that field offices are very pleased this committee is in existence.

There appears to be high acclaim that the cluster of this committee will lead to enforcement actions needed to help control such problems threat to the internal security of this country. Ourselves we will receive excellent field cooperation and assistance now that our mission is understood.

I. Organizations and Individuals

Black Militant Organization deleted

During this reporting period a member of the Special Service Group visited the office of the Chief Investigator of the House Internal Security Committee to inspect deleted records. The committee had subpoenaed various bank records in the San Francisco area. Arrangements have been made to reproduce certain parts of the records and we will forward them to the San Francisco District for assistance to the revenue agent and special agent assigned to the cases.

Two Organizations deleted

We have obtained additional information on both these organizations since we initiated field examinations.

The revenue agent (Washington Field Office) handling the examinations was contacted and he has reviewed, at our suggestion, the voluminous information now in our files. He states our additional file data will materially assist him in both these examinations.
Organization deleted

File review is continuing on this case. Photocopies of various copies of the returns filed by individuals have been received and are being reviewed at this time to determine if field actions may be warranted. Photocopies of gift tax returns filed by certain sympathizers are also being reviewed.

Two Individuals deleted

Telephone contacts were made with the Los Angeles and Detroit Districts to assist in closing these cases previously initiated by the Special Service Group.

Leftist Individual deleted

A thorough file review was completed but we were unable to determine any lack of compliance with internal revenue laws in this case.

II. Other Organizations and Individuals

Five individual case files (termed _ ) were closed as having no revenue potential.

III. Other Actions

Two Individuals and One Organization deleted

The Detroit District has submitted a memorandum report stating they have reviewed the information submitted to them in our proposal for possible audit action, but have concluded that enforcement action will not result in additional tax liability of "material compliance consequence." This is one of the very few declarations we have received on Special Service Group cases.

We are not questioning the District decision or its right to make the decision, as our referral letters (see copy attached) leave broad option. However, the information available indicates the individuals involved may be under-reporting their income and they are notorious campus and anti-drift activists having arrest records under anti-riot laws. They are the principal officers in the [deleted] an offshoot of the Students for Democratic Society, and have been identified as members of certain Communist front organizations.

This matter is cited in this report only for the purpose of suggesting that while revenue potential might not be large in some cases, there are instances where enforcement against flagrant infractions would have some salutary effect in this over-all battle against persons bent on destruction of this government.
