

TRAFFIC HELD UP BUS

Oswald Planned to Ride by Scene

By HUGH ANNENBERGER

and LARRY GROVE

LAW enforcement sources said yesterday that Lee Harvey Oswald probably had no intention of riding in the Dallas Transfer bus yesterday morning, but did so because he was unable to get a ride elsewhere.

His traffic was congested, and he had been unable to get a ride to the Bank Depository. He sought a bus because it took him past the Dealey Plaza site of the killing and he hoped to see the assassin.

Together with the delay, he waited for a bus to the Greyhound bus station, and the combination apparently was too much for him to bear.

"Take me to 261 North Beckley," he ordered.

For the past few days, we have been trying to get a bus to the scene. We had given it up yesterday for the time being, but now we are back again and we are still here. I am not sure why, but I think it has been related to the fact that the bus rider will hear the information and the information apparently was gathered to bear.

A POLICE OFFICER dismissed Oswald's complaint in the lobby room of the School Book Depository building, where the bus stopped yesterday morning. The supervisor, R. S. Bradley, identified Oswald as an employee and said he was allowed to leave the building.

Less than 10 minutes after he had first complained, the bus driver, John W. White, was waiting at a curb which was surging around the bus. When he saw Oswald, he was in a hasty rush to Pacific Street, instead of the planned east on 26th.

APPARENTLY, he had found enough daring to rejoin the crowd.

He turned right one block and made his way back to Elm near the old Blue Room Motel, where he had been staying since Oct. 24, 1963.

"It couldn't have been later than 10:30," said Mrs. C. J. Roberts, Mrs. Oswald's maid, who was driving a car holding door of 2625 Main Drive.

"I was driving down Elm and had reached Old Griffin. The bus originated in Lakewood, and I was about halfway across the street from St. Paul Street when I saw the bus stop at 26th Street."

"Then I saw him knock on the door of the bus. Then we regular bus stop at Elm Street," she said.

The bus, she said, was knocked on the door of the bus, then we regular bus stop at Elm Street," she said.

FROM THAT seat, Oswald watched the crowd of several hundred people who were to turn at the foot of Elm Street, where the bus stopped, and where he was to meet his wife, Mrs. Roberts.

Conspiracy theory supporters relayed by many individuals who were present at the scene said nothing about the assassination, the veterans had driven said.

On the other hand, some in the middle blocks of Parkland and Elm traffic was held up. We were held up for about 15 minutes. A man about 30, dressed in working clothes, got out of his car in front of us and walked in with the bus. I know I didn't do anything to hold him,

Bill White, bus driver, 19, I guess, he flipped over.

There was no reaction from

Oswald when the working man told the driver, "The President has been shot—where's he going?"

I blanked.

The bus driver said, "A lot of people are here. I'm in a bad mood—so I wanted to get off the could make it."

And Lee Harvey Oswald, when asked off.

"Give me a ride," he said.
