Both testicles incompletely descended -

5

clay

Adequate

Reacts quicker - often careless.

Attention is apt to wander. Has to be brought to task.

Mental Examination

Cooperative, talks freely.

States he doesn't like to live at home. He ~~hates~~ doesn't like his mother. Mother beats him & so he runs away.Runs away from school because he wants to go to various places.

Mystical often.

Has some sea knowledge & is interested. Boy on street told him about those things.

Eccentric reactions for talk everyone.

Discussion

Entirely at home situation.

Unpleasant place to live, many children at home &amp;

he cannot get any attention.

Early sex experience & interest. Wants to run away from home like his older brother.

S. J. J.

Reason for exam —

Boy's truancy, incorrigibility at home and mother's extremely erotic temperament which may be the cause of boy's bad behavior.

Mrs. R. has so little self control that during any conversation of the slightest importance, she becomes highly excited talking most rapidly and often in-intelligently; she admits she loses
her temper with the children and beats them: has a very disagreeable and sharp tongue and quarrels with her neighbors — often is ready to come to blows with them. In spite of her tempers severity with the children, she cannot control them and is always getting into quarrels because of their delinquencies, v. e., principally their destructive tendencies and disregard for other people's property.

Dr. Jacob Rabinowitz

Dear Madam:

This boy was examined by us on July 6th.

Physical examination showed no findings of special importance.

By mental tests he grades ten years seven months, and his intelligence quotient is 91. This is adequate intelligence.

The boy was co-operative and talked freely, his attention wandered and he states that he does not like to live at home because he does not like his mother. States his mother beats him and so he runs away. He could give no adequate reason for running away from school, but said that he went to amusement parks at this time. He has some sex knowledge and is greatly interested in sex matters. He stated that the boys in the street tell him about those things. This patient is eccentric, states that he can lick everyone and is as good as anybody at anything he wants to do.

The most important factor in this boy's problem is the home situation. He is eccentric and expects much attention, but is unable to get it as there are so many children at home. His behavior is further colored by his early sex experiences, his great interest and the gang situation in the street. From a superficial examination of his mother who was here with him, it is apparent that she has no insight into his problem, and that she is thoroughly inadequate in the further training of this boy.

It is, therefore, very advisable that he be put into a new environment where his characteristics will be understood, and where he will get adequate supervision and recreation. This will tend to take his interest away from the street gangs, and will be a good substitute for his sex delinquency.

Very truly yours,

Acting Director Institute for Juvenile Research

RE: Jacob Rubenstein

Dear Madam:

In your last conference with Dr. Sherman, regarding this boy, the conclusion reached was that the mother's mentality and general personality were such that it was impossible for her to adequately give this boy the right kind of training and supervision.

In our last conversation with the boy it was noticed that he felt that the mother was inferior and that he, therefore, did not have to abide by her rules.

Placement in a home, where intelligent supervision and discipline can be given him will in all probability improve his present behavior and his future conduct.

Yours very truly,

Director, Institute
for Juvenile Research
